

ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus for configuring and performing processing in a digital oscilloscope. The method comprises the steps of receiving one or more instructions and defining a plurality of processing elements based upon the received instructions. The plurality of processing elements is connected to define a processing web for performing a desired processing. The plurality of processing elements is synchronized to generate a synchronized result.